Title

Contemporary Treatment and Workflow Options: Designed to Prevent and Manage Complications for Completely and Partially Edentulous Patients

Abstract

Both conventional and contemporary treatments can improve function, esthetics, and self-esteem. Unfortunately, the complexity of therapy can vary greatly, and outcomes can be inconsistent. Clinicians are challenged to avoid failure and complications, and when this is not possible manage less than satisfying treatments. Evidence-based protocols and sound principles, irrespective of workflow, minimize the occurrence and severity of complications and can help simplify management. This presentation will focus on protocols and workflows associated with both successful and unsuccessful outcomes for completely and partially edentulous patients, and how they provide the foundation for prevention or management of complications.

Learning Objectives

1. Consider planning and treatment checklists and how these relate to prosthodontic treatment planning and the avoidance of complications
2. Detail the provision of care in the digital age and how to enhance confidence
3. Introduce and detail workflow concepts designed to improve quality and predictability of outcomes and
4. Review communication between TEAM members and detail treatment procedures used in treating edentulous and partially dentate patients
